TRAMPS CAUSED RIO GRANDE WRECK

A Passenger From Illinois Says They Turned The Switch Out of Revenge.

HAD BEEN PUT OFF A TRAIN.

All the Cars Left the Track and the Mail Car Was Thrown Clear Of All the Rest.

ESCAPE WAS MOST MARVELOUS.

Considering Speed of Train and Purpose of the Train Wreckers the Outcome is Wonderful,

Further details of yesterday's wreck on the Rio Grande Western at Pinto, 225.3 miles east of Salt Lake, go to confirm the story that the disaster was the malicious work of two tramps who were put off a train early in the evening of Wednesday.

It was asserted most positively by A passenger this morning that he personally examined the switch and found that two of the retaining bolts had been drawn and the remaining ones badig bent. This caused the rails at this point to spread and the train was ditched. A crowbar was also discovered 100 yards from the scene of the wreck, lying in a

That more were not injured and that none was killed is said to be a miracle, by all those who were on the train.

Possibly the best and most compreshensive story of the terrible crash is told by Mr. R. D. Berry of Spring. neld, Ill., who is resting at the Cullen hotel here, while his wife is being attended by the company doctor for a sprained ankle and body bruises in-dicted during the mad scramble through the windows of the car that was half tipped over,

R. D. BERRY'S NARRATIVE.

R. D. BERRY'S NARRATIVE.

Here is the story as told by Mr. Berry this morning to the "News;"

"When the crash came there was a regular panic in our car. Women were screaming and everbody was trying to get out of the car as fast as they could. I told my wife to keep caim while I mised the window. Then I let her out telling her not to drop to the ground until she was hanging from the full length of her arms. When she did drop she went about eight feet and sprained her ankle and otherwise hurt herself. Assoon as I made her comfortable I rushed to help forward. Here was a great commotion. The entire train had left the track, the last two cars standtrack, the last two cars standg on the ties. So great was the force of the shock that the mail car was lyfeet away from the tender by How the clerks and baggage en escaped without injury is worrying

LYING ON ITS SIDE.

The emigrant car was lying on its side with the lights still burning. We expected the gas tank to explode at any minute but the trainmen went right in after the injured while the conuctor tried to turn off the gas. It was minutes before the lights were extinguished. It was a pretty bad sight, Women, children and men were all thrown together and cut by glass. Most of them were also badly bruised from being thrown about as the car went

Women were crying out in half a dozen languages and there was all kinds of confusion, but the men worked and eventually got all of them out and made them as comfortable as possible.

THE TRAMP THEORY.

When daylight came we started to took for the cause of the accident and shuddered when we saw that had the free left the track at the culvert a y feet distant, we would have had awful wreck with a big list of d and injured.

I went over to the switch and there we that two bolts had been drawn out of the ties and the rest of the spikes were bent as though they had been tampered with. Shortly afterards I was informed that a crowbar been found in a culvert nearby. was the general verdict on the train that two tramps who had been put off train ahead earlier in the evening i purposely pulled the spike for re-

When the train pulled into Salt Lake

When the train pulled into Satt Lake at 1 o'clock this morning it was met at the depot by a delegation of friends of the passengers and missionaries, headed by William Langton, an uncle of Isaac Langton, Jr., who was in charge of the emigrants coming to Utah from Liverpool. The party found that the railroad had carriages waiting for 100 persons, and under Mr. Langton's supervision all the slightly in-jured were taken to the Grand Pacific while the four patients went to the L. D. S. hospital.

Mr. Langton stated this morning that he was specially grateful to the company for doing all in its power to relieve the situation and render him assistance.

About 3:30 o'clock in the morning our car seemed suddenly to fly up in the air, without much of a jar, and then landed partly on its side on the embankment. We quickly turned out, and found the forward cars on their sides, having left the trucks. The statement that there was a penic is not true. that there was a panic is not true. Everyone remained cool, and worked hard to affect a quick rescue. The greatest trouble was to prevent anyone from making a light, as there was gas in the air from the lamps. In this we were successful and finally everyone was taken from the cars all right. We had been on the road from Liverpool since the 9th inst., and numbered about 130 in the party.

Crisis in Utah State Guard Has Passed.

New Brigadier General Will Not be Appointed in the Immediate Future-Wholesale Resignation of Line Officers Not Now Expected-General Geoghegan Says Outlook is for Better Conditions.

From the indications of today, the risis in the National Guard is over, and no more serious disturbances will eccur following the resignation of Brig.-Gen. Sam C. Park and the removal of Adjt.-Gen. The office of brigadier-general will not be filled at present. Tacoma, Wash., June 23.-Train robbers made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the North Coast limited from the Twin Cities today three miles west of Puyallup. Three men boarded the train at Puyallup and when the train was three miles from the station ordered the engineer to step the train at a fire which was burning near the tracks. The bandits then ordered the engineer and the conductor to get out of the way while he made an attempt to back the train to the fire where his confederates were stationed. He failed to get the engine and called for the en-gineer to come back. The robber then began to realize his position and as the began to realize his position and as the engineer stepped into the cab he fired twice, one builet flattening on the boiler head.
